Court of Sessions, Oct. 19.—Before the Recorder and Judge N. M. Lownde, Esq., of Counsel for the prosecution, announced that the arraignment of Col. Monroe Edwards for forgery would not take place until this (Wednesday) morning, thereby disappointing a great crowd of persons who had assembled.

Jacob O. Koenig was tried for an assault and battery upon S. W. O. Koenig, of 55 Columbia-st., on the 11th of September last. The jury found him not guilty.

John D. Chapman was tried for grand larceny, in stealing a cross and swing-sabre, also a cravat, handkerchief, &c., together of the value of $157, from the auction store of David C. Porter, No. 55 Beaver-st., at different times since the 1st of September last. William Topping, clerk of Mr. Porter, deposed that the above goods, and others, were taken from Porter's store, and that he found them in the store of prisoner. No. 23 Carpenter-st., where Mr. Porter's goods were sent up on a search warrant. A large sum of money was also taken from the store, which was estimated at $750, which was taken on the 15th September. The accused proved his previous character. The prisoner had all the goods entered in his book of goods purchased, and a great part of them pertaining to be his and debts from those of whom they were apparently purchased. It was contended, however, that he made and appropriated himself to them.

The evidence went to show that the goods always came in prisoner's store put up in good merchantable order, and as invoices for them—many of which were given to him, and found closed up in boxes by the hands of persons on account of their being of value. The prisoner was in the habit of buying goods from pedlers, and taking no bill except that he was often at the auction store of Mr. Porter, mending round and leaning over the goods, but never purchasing anything, and that suspicion of him going to the clerks was excited of which he was informed, and continued to go there afterwards.

He was at length defended by Messrs. Merrill & Terhune, as prosecution, before the Hon. Mr. J. Bacon, Esq., and the trial was adjourned, and he was remanded for further inquiry against him.

Preliminary.—The Grand Jury came into Court with number of bills of indictment, and said they had examined their business, but the court wished them to meet again on Friday, when some other matters would be laid before them for their action, and that they would then be discharged. They also made a very long presentment of various matters as evils or as misuses that ought to be abated.

The presentment was read by Mr. Boggs, of the Evening Post, a member of the Grand Jury, and the trials of the cases with him were published in the Post.

The Grand Jury sent the great number of cases of petty and minor crimes brought before them, originating in contempt, which ought to be abated; also the practice of Anderson and other magistrates discharging prisoners from the watchhouses at night, and Police magistrates discharging them in the morning before complaints can appear; also the crying the sale of newspapers on the streets on Sundays by boys, to the disturbance of the peace and comfort of the sober and serious portion of the community, and of the places of worship, and vice-mongering, and of the sale of sweepstakes, and lottery tickets, and better ones should be enacted; also the gauges of children are sent on Sundays and other days to gauges about the wharves, and steal from carts, boxes, boxes, that are exposed, and recommending that these Sunday officers be appointed to traverse the wharves and prevent and arrest this evil; also the practice of some corrupting the Police offices and procuring worthless and irresponsible bail for criminals, thereby enabling them to escape trial, conviction, and punishment.

They also presented as a nuisance the obstruction of the docks by pedlers' stands, and of Chatham square by auctioneers, with their furniture, rendering the passage difficult and difficult. The Court wished the jury to visit the prison and other public institutions, and they adjourned for the day.
